Glen Cove students learned about their prospects after high school when the guidance department held its third annual College Fair in the gymnasium at the high school.

The event, which was attended by representative from more than 90 colleges and the Armed Forces, included two workshops: Financial Aid 101: Understanding the Financial Aid Process, presented by Vincent Tunstall, manager of new student enrollment at LIU Post and Transitioning to College for Students with Disabilities, presented by Alyssa Provenzano, assistant director of disability services at New York Institute of Technology.

According to Interim Guidance Chairperson Diane Johnson, the fair provides district students with valuable information.

"It's important for our youngsters to see the many opportunities available to them when they leave Glen Cove," Johnson said. "There are also many careers that are constantly changing and the people here can answer questions about careers that maybe didn't exist five years ago."

College-Bound Student-Athlete Night at Glen Cove

The Glen Cove High School Athletic Department hosted a College-Bound Student-Athlete Workshop on Jan. 6 for students in seventh-12th grades who are interested in playing a sport at the collegiate level.

The discussion was led by college coaches from the Division II level: Bree Nasti and Ophir Sadeh (women's softball) from Adelphi University and Meghan McNamara (women's lacrosse) from LIU Post.

Glen Cove High School coaches Chris MacDonald and Nicole Sileo were also members of the panel. Girls and boys tennis and wrestling coach MacDonald played soccer and tennis at the College of Mount Saint Vincent, a Division III program. Girls lacrosse coach Sileo was a lacrosse player at LIU Post, a Division II school.

Glen Cove High School senior Lindsay Dwyer, who recently signed an official Letter of Intent with a full athletic scholarship to the University of Illinois, Division I Big 10 for Gymnastics, rounded out the panel and provided a student-athlete's perspective to those in attendance.

The panel presented a series of topics that included the roles of the student-athlete, parent and school in the college-bound process. Also discussed were the nuts and bolts of recruiting, the college search, financial aid, NCAA Clearinghouse and Eligibility, and college-level competition. After the presentation, time was allotted for questions. All participants were provided resources and information regarding the college-bound process.

Nicole Menchise Presentation at NSHM

The North Shore Historical Museum was filled with members and friends to hear the presentation by NSHM board member Nicole Menchise on the Oyster Wars. Her power point presentation told the story, through the 19th century newspaper articles, of the greed which led to the oyster wars. The educational and entertaining presentation was very well received by the large group in attendance. Ms Menchise lives in Oyster Bay and is on the staff at the Oyster Bay Historical Society.. Light refreshments were served following the informative presentation.

NSHM is located at 140 Glen Street in Glen Cove and the current exhibit is George Gach and the North Shore, which will be there until February 27. For further information on future events and exhibits call the director Amy Driscoll at 516 801-1191 or visit northshorehistoricalmuseum.org

Counselor Arrested

On January 12th Officer Carlos Fernandez of the Glen Cove Police arrested a Senior Assistant Counselor who was responsible for overseeing the daily activities of Chinese foreign exchange students who were residing at 1100 Avalon Square in Glen Cove. During the first week of January 2016 the victim noticed $1,000 missing from his apartment room. According to Police, on January 12th the victim noticed an additional $800.00 missing from his room. Glen Cove Police Officer Carlos Fernandez began investigating the incident and was able to tie this defendant into the two room larcenies. The defendant is identified as 26 year old Salvator M. Burgess who resides in Brooklyn NY.

According to Glen Cove Police Lieutenant John Nagle, "this defendant was trusted to oversee the daily activities of the exchange students and had access to their rooms." The defendant is charged with two counts of petit larceny and will be arraigned in Glen Cove Court on January 19th.

Glenwood Landing Students Get Immersed in Submerge Storytelling

In January 2016, Mr. Cory Levine and his staff at Submerge Storytelling have come back to Glenwood Landing School to immerse students in an exciting multi-sensory, hands-on storytelling experience based on NY State Standards and the Common Core. Interdisciplinary lessons include writing and reading comprehension, STEAM(Science, Technology, Engineering, Art, and Mathematics) skills including coding, geography, and areas of social studies including civilizations.

Mr. Levine said, "Submerge Storytelling transforms an entire classroom into the setting of a story. Students interact with and explore this story-world in order to draw conclusions about the story's characters, plot, and themes." Submerge Storytelling also:

- Entertains children by facilitating a physical and metaphysical environment where children can lose themselves in their imagination.
- Teaches and assesses critical thinking and problem-solving strategies through a pragmatic educational curriculum.
- Teaches important life skills and values through text-to-self literary connections.
- Employs interactive learning strategies to foster a sense of individuality, camaraderie, and community."

Mrs. Marcantonio said, "From the moment the children walk into the room, you could see the excitement on their faces as they glance at the array of stuffed animals, baseball hats, maps, artwork, and toys...making the story become real!" This year, throughout the month of January, 2nd-5th graders will have five consecutive days of learning with 50-60 minute sessions per day/ per class. 1st graders and kindergarten classes will participate in two consecutive days of lessons with 30 minute per day/per class sessions. All students will explore character traits, collect evidence, and draw conclusions from visual artwork. Additionally, older students (2nd grade and up) will discover clues, break codes, and analyze evidence.

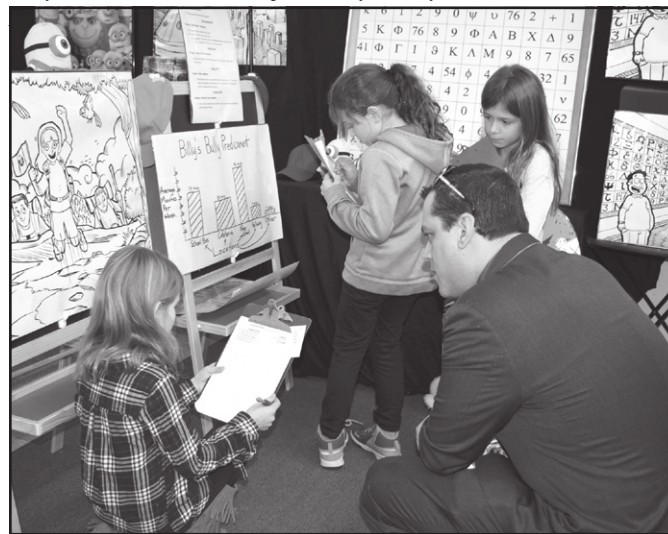

One GWL student said, "Submerge Storytelling creates a learning experience that was extraordinarily fun! Instead of having you only look and listen, you are allowed to touch. I loved the fact that you didn't get the obvious clues. You had to figure out which clues were important on your own." Another student said, "It was really fun but you are also learning at the same time. I really liked that there were clues around. You could discover where the main character was."

Mr. Levine concluded by saying, "Submerge Storytelling is a unique experience that challenges children with complex tasks that build the same higher-order and critical thinking skills necessary to succeed in today's classrooms. Also, as the curriculum evolves, the children study the complexities of character to uncover important themes such as integrity, morality, work ethic, respect, and trust. This combination of academia and values will help turn children into productive members of society." He added, "We are the only ones doing this distinctive type of storytelling right now."

Many thanks to School-wide Enrichment Teacher Audra Marcantonio and the SCA for bringing this unique and educational program to Glenwood Landing School. Mr. Levine, CEO/Head Writer of Submerge Storytelling, is a teacher for the New York Department of Education as well as a playwright/actor. Additionally, he has many people on staff including a special education teacher to help out. For more information, please visit www.submergestorytelling.com.

Holiday Generosity from City Hall Employees Helps Local Family Start the New Year Off in Comfort

For over ten years the employees of the City of Glen Cove have donated food and clothing to support one needy family in the City. Each year social workers from the Glen Cove School District help to select a family in need during the holiday season. According to Debbie McCalla, City employee donation coordinator, this year employees donated 10 boxes of food, $650.00 dollars in cash and presents for the entire family. Donations to the program continue to increase each year. "I am proud of the commitment from our City employees to help those less fortunate each holiday season. I'd like to give special thanks to a staff member of the City Clerk's Office, Debbie McCalla, who has selflessly organized this program for the past ten years," said Mayor Reggie Spinello.

Glen Cove Youth Bureau "After 3" Hosted Career Exploration Program with Visit to Glen Cove Hospital

Students from the Glen Cove Youth Bureau's "After 3" program were invited to tour Glen Cove Hospital and explore possible careers in medicine. The middle school students were welcomed to the hospital by Dr. Sherman, Chairman of the Department of Medicine. During a presentation in the hospital's board room students were urged to study biology in preparation for a career in medicine. "The Youth Bureau's Career Exploration Program provides a mix of off-site tours, guest speakers, and job preparation workshops to students participating in the "After 3" program," said Youth Bureau Employment Coordinator Jacki Yonick. "Career Exploration helps students gauge their interests and prepares them to choose a career path that best fits their interests."

After the board room question and answer session, Dr. Sherman along with hospital Community Relations Liaison Patrick Mack led the students on a tour of the emergency room, x-ray room, and endoscopy lab. "Glen Cove hospital is an important educational resource for our community and this is a great example of their partnership with our community. I'd like to thank Dr. Sherman for providing this great opportunity to the participants of our "After 3" program," said Mayor Reggie Spinello.

For more information about the After 3 Program please contact Spiro Tsirkas at 516-277-1303 and for more information regarding the Career Exploration Program contact Jacki Yonick at 516-671-4600.

Director of Public Works Teaches Webelos How to Survey Land for Engineering Badge

The Glen Cove Cub Scout's Pack 6 Webelos visited City Hall to learn how to survey land and measure property lines from the City's Director of Public Works, James Byrne. Mr. Byrne, a certified engineer, showed the young men how to read survey maps and use Google Earth. The attentive group was also shown how to read satellite maps to view property lines. In addition, Mr. Byrne highlighted the many functions of the City of Glen Cove's Department of Public Works. The group learned about the City's new Single Stream recycling program and discussed the importance of the Boy Scout's "leave no trace" commitment when they leave camp sites and outdoor activities. This interactive educational session is part of the Webelos' effort to earn an engineering badge.

North Shore Club Presidents Join Hands At The Dais

The annual take over meeting by the North Shore key Club took place on January 14th 2016 at the Swan Club; The North Shore key Clubbers become Kiwanians for the evening. Key Club President Elias Mastakouris and his Executive Board took the dais as Kiwanians and did a very fine job running the meeting. The Key Clubbers gave a very impressive review of the key club year 2015-2016 raising more than $5000 for charity and explained their Single Serve Project: "Compassion in Action," as well as their Major Emphasis Project: "North Shore Opens Their Hears To Give a Helping Hand For Service." The North Shore Kiwanis club, who sponsors the North Shore Key Club, is always impressed with the professionalism of these young men and women and their efforts to make a difference to our community.

Honoring Vets at The Regency

by Tab Hauser

Not all veterans were able to make it to the Doughboy Memorial ceremony besides the library on eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month. To honor them Mayor Reggie Spinello, his wife Coleen and Fireman Michael Mienko that afternoon visited veterans residing at Regency on School Street.

At the Regency Mayor Spinello gave out city citations to thirteen veterans. They were Fred Mei, Edward Agoglia, Arthur Cadillo, Thomas D'Urso, Bob Hohenrath, Joseph Markowski, Walter Meyer, Raymond Million, John Noetzel, Walter Nordmann, Ralph Pannetta, Melvin Rabin, Edwin Reirersen and Peter Tedesco. The oldest of these senior vets was 94 years old. During the presentation that took place at lunch many of the vets humbly spoke about their service. This got the attention of several Regency staff members who stopped what they are doing to listen and pay their respects to these fine men. Mayor Spinello thanked them for their time that afternoon and for their service.

North Shore MS Eighth Graders Study the ‘Roaring 20’s

North Shore 8th graders participated in a ‘Roaring 20s’ party under the direction of their teachers Ms. Larkin, Mr. Freund, and Mr. Curtin as part of the Social Studies curriculum. Teacher Keith Freund said, “Sometimes history needs to be experienced, in order to be fully understood. Learning about the 1920s in a traditional classroom would not do the ‘Roaring 20s’ justice.”

In their Social Studies classes, the students researched the most colorful people of the decade, took on their roles, and then became them. Transforming the library into a speakeasy with posters and various decorations, the students dressed, acted and spoke like their 1920s counterparts. If you walked into the middle school library, you would have students dressed as flappers and gangsters while jazz music was piped into the room to set the mood! Cold drinks were flowing and chips were available too! Mr. Freund told his “fellas and janes” to be cool if anyone entered the room because he would take care of it! In addition, Mr. Freund reminded his guests to “speakeasy” about the good time they all had after waking up the next day!

The decade of the 1920’s in history was often characterized as a period of American prosperity and optimism. The eighth graders learned that Prohibition was cited as jump-starting the Jazz Age! According to novelist F. Scott Fitzgerald, during Prohibition, "The parties were bigger...the pace was faster..."

To conclude, the students also participated in a Charleston dance contest! Many thanks to the faculty, staff, and students who participated in this historic, hands-on learning opportunity. It was evident that a "roaring" time was had by all!

Pictured are North Shore 8th graders at a Roaring 20’s party where they researched the most colorful people of the decade, took on their roles, and then became them! Article and photos by Shelly Newman

Great Book Guru

- Ann DiPietro

Dear Great Book Guru,
My childhood friends Julia and Claire are celebrating their birthday in the next few days so I think a book about twins might be great fun to read and discuss when we get together to celebrate.
Any thoughts?
Toasting with Twins

Dear Toasting with Twins,
 I recently read Daniel Sada’s ONE OUT OF TWO, a very short, very funny, very thought-provoking book about the Gamal sisters. Set in mid twentieth century rural Mexico, the novel introduces us to Constiucion and Gloria, identical twins who share a home, a business, and eventually a fiancé. In a storyline reminiscent of Charles Dickens, the girls are orphaned at a young age and left in the care of a distant relative who withholds their inheritance for many years. When they are finally able to claim this money, the sisters create a very rich, very satisfying life for themselves – one out of two... until Oscar Segura arrives. We are party to the sisters’ sometimes comic, sometimes dramatic interludes with him as a colorful bevy of friends and neighbors look on. We see their lives come together and then pull apart and then come together again. It is this raveling and unraveling of their union that makes Sada’s novella such a fascinating read. Recommended!

Name the Celebrity

This week's celebrity, a television and film actress, was born Millicent Fogel, in Chicago, on Sept. 13, 1931. She graduated from the University of Illinois with a bachelor degree in sociology. Developing an interest in dance, she moved to NYC, where she studied alongside Martha Graham. Dissatisfied with her career as a dancer, she went into modeling, working with Vogue, Harper's and other publications. Still uninspired, however, she entered the Theatre Studio to study acting, working under actors Curt Conway and Lonny Chapman. Progressing to the Actors Studio, she was instructed by Lee Strasberg. Her first acting role was in Paddy Chayevsky's play "Middle of the Night" which embarked on a national tour in Oct. 1957. Accompanying our celebrity was fellow actor and newly acquired husband, Martin Landau. Between 1966 and 1969, our celebrity appeared, alongside her husband, in the major role of "Cinnamon Carter" in the original television drama "Mission: Impossible". She also starred as the same character in a 1997 episode of "Diagnosis: Murder" with Dick Van Dyke. For this role, she won three consecutive Emmy Awards for Best Dramatic Actress for her performance in 1967, '68 and '69, in addition to a Golden Globe Award.

Last week's celebrity was Raymond Bailey. "He was the real-life uncle of actor William Sylvester, who played "Dr. Heywood Floyd" in "2001: A Space Odyssey" (1968). In the early 1950s and '60s, when TV became big, Mr. Bailey was in demand for character parts on many shows such as "Alfred Hitchcock Presents", "Gunsmoke", "The Rifleman", "77 Sunset Strip", "The Twilight Zone", "Bonanza", "The Untouchables", "Perry Mason" and "Mr. Ed", to name a few. Before his break into TV, he was a great Hollywood example of "If at first you don't succeed...", having tried many careers such as pineapple picker, radio singer and banker. It was in TV that he got his most famous part on the sit-com "The Beverly Hillbillies", as, ironically, banker "Milburn Drysdale", whose fists were tighter than "Ely May's" pants. During the run of the show, he appeared, in character, as banker "Drysdale" on "Dobie Gillis", with Dwayne Hickman, one of the first cross-over show experiences of TV. Also, interesting was, before joining the cast of "Beverly Hillbillies", he would usually be seen without his toupee for many of his roles.

After the show went of the air in 1971, he acted in a few less-worthy movie roles. He reportedly began suffering symptoms of Alzheimer's disease, which visibly affected his performances in the last episodes of "The Beverly Hillbillies". All his co-actors helped him get through his scenes, often adlibbing to cover the goofs. Bailey was unable to work after 1975. In his final days, he divided his time between his California condo and his houseboat in Laguna Niguel. He kept touch with former "TBH" co-star, Nancy Kulp, who portrayed his ever loyal and "by the book" secretary "Miss Jane Hathaway", whom he had nicknamed "Slim". Mr. Bailey died of a heart attack, on April 15, 1980, at the age of 75.
