GMA Martial Arts Donates $420.00 To Deasy School PTA

Sensei Hender Alvarado and Sensei Andrew Goldberg of GMA Martial Arts in Glen Cove presented the K.A. Deasy School PTA a giant check in the amount of $420.00. Principal Ken Craft, PTA President Amanda O'Brien, and PTA Vice-President Buffy Lupinski were present to receive the donation. The funds were raised as a follow-up initiative to a "Conflict Avoidance" assembly delivered by the martial arts instructors at Deasy Elementary School earlier this year. After the assembly, 12 students took advantage of a "6-Week Special" agreed upon by GMA Martial Arts and the Deasy School PTA. Each 6-Week Special purchased entitled the student to 6 weeks of martial arts training at a discounted rate of $69.99 and included free karate uniform. GMA Martial Arts provided the martial arts instruction, the karate uniform, and donated 50% of the proceeds directly to the Deasy School PTA. The Deasy School PTA supports faculty, staff, parents, and most importantly the children through an array of educational, cultural arts, community outreach, and fun-filled events. The Deasy School PTA encourages all families to support their work by purchasing a membership and invites parents to volunteer for PTA events throughout the year.

Local Teen Holds Fundraising Event To Support Efforts To Find Families For Older Youth In Foster Care

When 17-year old Ryan O'Day read and learned about the challenges facing youths in foster care, he was moved to act and decided to lend a hand – and a few feet – to do what he could to help.

And so the junior at North Shore High School has organized a day filled with basketball and track clinics, "Teens Gotta Believe," to help raise funds for the Coney Island-based "You Gotta Believe," a non-profit whose mission is to assist older youths in foster care find permanent, adoptive families before they age out.

O'Day last year read the New York Times bestseller, "Etched in Sand," by New Suffolk attorney and author Regina Calcaterra, depicting her childhood of abuse, homelessness and foster care on Long Island.

O'Day was prompted to read it by his mother, Jillian O'Day after Calcaterra spoke to her book club where the author shared how a small act of kindness towards a child in need, specifically a foster child, can help build that child's self worth thereby having a lifelong impact. Jillian discussed that aspect with her son, who then decided to take action.

"I decided to take something I love, basketball, and combine it with track to create this event," Ryan said. "This is really for a great cause that I truly believe in and I am hoping others can believe in it too."

He worked with administrators at his school, as well as You Gotta Believe, to put the event together.

The tournament is scheduled for April 2, from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m., at North Shore High School in Glen Head. Both 3 on 3 basketball teams and track participants will pay $20 per person, and the funds raised will be donated to You Gotta Believe. (More information is available at teensgottabelieve.org) The sports clinics will follow an author talk and book signing by Calcaterra.

"I couldn't be more proud of Ryan," said his mother, Jillian O'Day. "He felt some of the same things I felt about this problem that clearly exists and wanted to do something to help. He feels a parallel to the kids that age out of foster care and wants to raise awareness - they are his peers. You hear so much about bullying and it is so great when kids support each other. He has always been a great kid with a big heart and we are so proud of the mature young man he has become."

Calcaterra is a member of the board of You Gotta Believe (yougottabelieve.org), the only non-profit organization in the NY Metro area that works to find permanent, adoptive families for youths in foster care. The organization began work in 1995, and works against the backdrop of a region with about 1,000 children who "age out" of the foster care system each year without having a permanent family.

Without a permanent family, foster youth aging out today face what many of their peers have and continue to face, homelessness.

"Ryan is a dynamo," Calcaterra said. "His enthusiasm and commitment to raise awareness of the plight of older foster children and the efforts he has put forth to raise money to assist them find forever homes is an inspiration. This event will do so much good for other kids who just want something that many of their peers have - a permanent family," Calcaterra said.

"You Gotta Believe is thrilled to have Ryan in our corner," You Gotta Believe Board President Gretchen Beidl said. "Many people do not realize there are teenagers in our communities who are hoping for the love and support of a permanent, loving family. Ryan is helping us spread the word and we are impressed with the initiative he has taken to create this event. He is a great role model and we appreciate his efforts tremendously!"

"We are thrilled at this incredible event that Ryan has created. We strongly believe it is the voice of youth that will ultimately change the system for future kids. Not only does this event work to reduce the stigmas faced by youth in care, but it creates an opportunity to raise awareness about the critical issue of youth who age out of foster care without the lifetime families they need to thrive," said Susan Grundberg, executive director of You Gotta Believe. "Events such as TeensGottaBelieve help us to raise funding that we can put to use immediately to serve youth and families."

Name the Celebrity

This week's celebrity was born in Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin on Oct. 23, 1918. During the 1930s, he studied drama and acted in shows before he worked for the armed services, and served with the U.S. Navy as WWII ended. He was a music major at the University of Wisconsin, a drama major at Iowa State University and attended Carroll College before receiving a degree from Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa. Cornell College later presented him with an Honorary Doctor Fine Arts Degree.

His acting career got off on a good start once he arrived in NYC in 1946, landing a part as the understudy to Gary Merrill in the long-running play "Born Yesterday" on Broadway. By the time he appeared in his third play, "Man and Superman" (1949), he was billed third in the cast and won a Daniel Blum Award for his performance. He co-starred three times with the legendary Helen Hayes, most famously in "The Glass Menagerie" in 1950. Between 1953 and 1955, he appeared in the TV series "Foreign Intrigue". He also guest starred on many TV series, among them "Mission: Impossible", "Gunsmoke", "Twilight Zone", "Combat", and "The Fugitive" as the fella who tried to kill Lt. Gerard after "Dr Kimble", played by David Janssen, saved his life. He portrayed "Mr. Flint" in "Star Trek" episode "Requiem for Methuselah" (1969).

One of his choice movie roles was in "Planet of the Apes" (1968) as "Honorious", the orangutan and Deputy Minister of Justice in mid-40th century A.D.

Last Week's Celebrity

Last week's celebrity was Grayson Hall. Before appearing in "The Night of the Iguana", she had an active stage career in NYC. She portrayed "Irma", the madam of an irregular bordello amidst a civil war in the controversial Jean Genet play "The Balcony" for over a year at The Circle in the Square Theatre in Greenwich Village. It was the longest running off-Broadway play for decades.

Hall's best-known TV role was that of "Dr. Julia Hoffman", in "Dark Shadows", where she portrayed the loyal confidant to the vampire, "Barnabas Collins", played by Jonathon Frid. Other roles that she played on the show were those of "Countess Natalie Dupres", the gypsy, "Magda Rakosi", the Collins' mansion housekeeper, and "Constance Collins", sister of "Brutus Collins". She also appeared in both "Dark Shadows" feature films: "House of Dark Shadows", again as "Dr. Julia Hoffman" and "Night of Dark Shadows", as a new character, housekeeper, "Carlotta Drake".

After the TV serial "Dark Shadows" ended in 1971, she had a brief stint as a reporter "Marge Grey" on the TV soap-op, "All My Children" (1973). She continued acting on stage as "Wanda" in another Jean Genet play, "The Screens" (1971-72) and "The Lady in Gray / The Fly" in "Happy End", which co-starred Meryl Streep and Christopher Lloyd. Her last onscreen roll was that of "Euphemia Ralston", "Delila's" scheming mother in the TV soap opera "One Life to Live" (1982-83). After a six month battle with lung cancer, she died in NYC, at the age of 62. A simple marker near her Hudson Valley home reads "Grayson Hall--Aug. 7, 1985"

Great Book Guru

- Ann DiPietro

Dear Great Book Guru,
I have found this current election cycle fascinating and wonder how things will all work out. While I have attended a number of debate parties here in Sea Cliff, I still crave for more insight. Is there a book you would recommend to help me really understand what's going on?

Election News Junkie

Dear Election News Junkie,
I just finished a fascinating historical novel that in many ways mirrors our current political scene: IMPERIUM by Robert Harris. Set in Ancient Rome, it details the political rise of Cicero, one of Rome's most famous rulers. His story is told from the perspective of his slave/secretary Tiro, who invented a system of shorthand -vestiges of which we still use (e.g. &, etc.). The Cicero we meet as a young man is from a modest middle-class background but with extraordinary intelligence and ambition. The political world he takes on is eerily like our own:

vast amounts of money spent to sway voters, the slandering of opponents and their wives, the demonization/deification of party leaders, and terrorist attacks (in this case pirates) to frighten the citizenry. Yes, secretly recorded conversations (ala Nixon), political jaunts, forged documents, and crass entertainment-all play a part in Cicero's first election campaign. We watch with fascination, but also with a feeling of dread as we witness the escalating corruption of Rome and wonder where are we headed? Highly recommended!

Easter Egg Hunt at St John's of Lattingtown

Following the 10:30am service at St John's of Lattingtown Episcopal Church, which for the first time had a sign language interpreter Margaret LoBoe, from Mill Neck Manor, School for the Deaf, an Easter Egg hunt was organized by the Sunday School parents and teachers, led by Courtney Callahan the Sunday School Director. An English Maypole was set up in the center of the Memorial Garden and colorful chocolate Easter eggs were scattered around for the children to collect in their Easter Baskets.

Easter Sunday was also the last day for Music Director Eric Milnes, who ended the service with an Organ Voluntary of his own composition as the packed church gave him a standing ovation. The choir loft was packed with people who have been choir members over the past 34 years of Milnes' tenure at St. John's. Under his guidance the choir has become one of the most renowned in the New York area. Included in the Easter service was Handel's Hallelujah Chorus and Schubert's Gloria from Mass in G Major.

Since WW I, thousands of chemicals have been introduced into our daily environments. Some of the most harmful, that pose the greatest risk to our children, are those used in our own homes.

According to the EPA, one common household chemical poisons 25,000 children each year. Do you know which ones?
